

MSc Genes, Environment and Development

The MSc Genes, Environment & Development (GED) takes a highly interdisciplinary approach to the study of how genetics and the environment ('nature and nurture') combine during human development to produce behaviour, diseases and psychiatric disorders.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=18nrWXwltlw>

Funded scholarships are available for this programme for September 2015 – please see our webpage for more information.
<http://www.kcl.ac.uk/ioppn/depts/mrc/study/pgtaught/Peter-McGuffin-Anne-Farmer-Prize-Bursaries.aspx>

Further information about the programme can be found at our website:
<http://www.kcl.ac.uk/ioppn/depts/mrc/study/pgtaught/sgdpMSconlyprogramme.aspx>

Closing date for applications: Friday 31st July 2015

You are advised to apply as early as possible to avoid disappointment.

