

Co-Editor Search, Transportation Journal

The American Society of Transportation and Logistics (AST&L) is seeking a Co-Editor for the Transportation Journal. Terms of service and qualifications are described below. Applicants should provide a proposal describing their vision for the journal and the ability of their institution to support the editorship. Those interested in applying should contact Ms. Laurie Denham, President of AST&L, at ldenham@astl.org to receive more detailed information about the editorial responsibilities. Proposals and queries should also be sent to Laurie Denham.

Term of Office

The incoming co-editor will serve for six years beginning July 1, 2015.

Qualifications

Co-editors are full-time, senior faculty members at schools accredited by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business, who (a) have established reputations in the overall field of transportation, logistics, and supply chain management, with particular emphasis on the transportation component within the field, (b) are members in good standing of the American Society of Transportation and Logistics, and (c) possess the time, motivation, integrity, and administrative and inter-personal relations skills required for effective and timely execution of all duties of the position. It is essential that the school at which the Co-Editors are faculty members be willing and able to provide the necessary administrative support and office support services for the Co-Editors. It is recommended that a part-time clerical position be designated in one of the co-editors' universities to assist with communication and basic editorial duties. In addition, the schools are expected to support travel of the Co-Editors to visit the journal publisher as needed and professional meetings involving Transportation Journal-related activities.
