

Ivan Dragicevis: Message of Medjugorje at MIT Thursday 2/11/10

Ivan Dragicevis is one of the “children” of Medjugorje who many believe receives messages from the Blessed Mother. He will be coming to the MIT Chapel on Thursday evening, February 11, from 5 pm to 8 pm. This visit provides a tremendous opportunity to be present at a uniquely grace filled event that many faithful have travelled thousands of miles to attend.

During this time Ivan will give a presentation about his experiences and a description of Medjugorje and its message. We will also pray the Rosary. Ivan usually has his apparition during the time of praying the Rosary. We will also celebrate Mass and there will be some opportunity for the Sacrament of Confession.

Everyone is most welcome to this grace filled event.

N.B. At the present time Medjugorje and its messages has not received official recognition as an approved site of apparition nor have they been formally disavowed. One is under no obligation to believe in the authenticity of the messages, but one is certainly free to do so pending the final judgment of the Church. In all matters we defer to the Church and will obediently comply with its judgment when it is promulgated.
