What the UA President and Vice President do

The UA President and Vice President are the two primary officers of the Undergraduate Association. Candidates run as a ticket.

UA President:

The President serves as Chief Executive Officer of the UA. He or she is the default primary contact person in the UA. The President represents the MIT undergraduate body and attends regular meetings with student leaders, administrators, and faculty. He or she may make statements to local or national media on behalf of the MIT undergraduate body. The UA President sits ex officio on a number of committees both inside and outside of the UA.

UA Vice President:

The Vice President assists the President in their duties. The Vice President generally oversees inner workings of the UA. He or she helps to manage the various UA committees and regularly meets with committee chairs. The UA Vice President sits ex officio on a number of committees both inside and outside of the UA.
